DETAILED ACTION

Indicated Allowability Withdrawn

1. The indicated allowability of claims 8 and 9 is withdrawn in view of the newly discovered reference(s) to Layne (US 3,662,660). Rejections based on the newly cited reference(s) follow.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

2. The text of those sections of Title 35, U.S. Code not included in this action can be found in a prior Office action.

3. Claims 8 and 9 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Adam (EP 0 908 767) or Kurematsu (JP 2-079841) in view of Layne (US 3,662,660).

The primary references disclose processing a material in an apparatus having a planar inclined surface along which the material is passed. There is an inlet for the introduction of the processing liquid at the upper part of the processing section. (In Adam there is an inclined plane 14, material 16 and solution entering a area of rollers 20; for Kurematsu there is an inclined surface 20, material P, and solution enters at 21A, 21B, 21C). Neither reference discloses an inclined surface having a velvet or felt resistance material.

Layne discloses a material processing apparatus with processing solution flowing by gravity down the material and discloses using a wettable material such as felt or fabric to cause the processing solution to wet and cling to the wettable material. Thus, it already known to use fabric such as felt or velvet to act as a resistance to the flow of a liquid, therefore, one of ordinary skill in the art at the time the invention was made would have been motivated to use wettable material with the Adam or Kurematsu apparatus to control the flow of the solution through the processing apparatus, to control the contact time of the solution with the material to be processed and to control uniformity of development.

Allowable Subject Matter

4. Claim 10 is allowed.
5. The following is a statement of reasons for the indication of allowable subject matter: the prior art does not teach or suggest using a resistance material comprising closely packed spheres in a material processing apparatus for washing substances from a coated surface of a material.

Conclusion

6. The prior art made of record and not relied upon is considered pertinent to applicant's disclosure. Earle et al. reference belonging to the assignee of the present application discloses on page 2 that: "The film 6 is also agitated when the plunger 1 is reciprocated up and down over the development time. The agitation can be further embellished by placing materials known to provide a physical rubbing action on the tank wall. Such materials need to be chosen to achieve the agitation without imparting physical damage to the emulsion surface to be processed. These can be any known conventional materials such as fine nylon mesh coated with pvc, velvet plush as found in film cassettes or plushes typically found on porous pads used in photographic processing. These are examples only and it will be understood by those skilled in the art that the invention is not limited to such materials.
